Cheers y'all!

Yesterday I came up with my absolute High-End Final Insight of all.

The Final Decode.

It summed up all the undue complexity that ever emerged in anything.

Today, I'm a do the opposite. Yah. Right. No kiddin'

I sum up all the Low-End rudimentary in its root.

How to do that? Well. Because all the complexity amounted into coding and decoding, it took a short and final Statement as of that.

To sum up the rudimentary, a short Statement wouldn't do.

So instead of a Statement, it's a short story.

The Story's called "Human Nature"

And so it goes:

Human Nature

Short Story By Lord Dionys Himself

By now, most everyone has done their share of explaining the fundamental drive of humanity. Was it sex and replication? Keeping the race alive over generations? Building tools to facilitate it? Fighting animals that were dangerous? Fighting weather that was harmful? Making houses, transportation, languages, movies, computers, smartphones to share information, not only nearby, but eventually Globally, even Universally? Excessively lifting Dumbbells and doing drug intake to become a super-being, a Mister Universe?

Escaping obtrusive neighbours and sophisticated scammers? Building firewalls, Encryption, law enforcement agencies. Voting Political Leadership. Keeping aliens out of the picture. Trying to avoid sleep abductions. Meditation. Mystic teachings. Traveling to the Moon. Sending probes to Mars. And even, a whole different category, because non-planetarian and non-universal : Throwing a telescope into the Sun.

What's the real fundamental drive of humanity to have done all of this?

Galactic Religion and Politics? Sinister agendas from Billions of calendar years Ago? Small groups of chosen ones to do it all for ultimate power? Worldwide? One ring to rule them all? So no one comes close – ever? A self-purpose of power, after all?

Secret societies and sects that ruled behind the scenes and then before the scenes?

Experts and specialists that spent aeons of human generations in every conceivable way to launch the pinnacles of their expertise into human ventures at the right time in the right place, with atomic precision in both where and when. Outrageous logistics in goods and manpower. Emancipation.

Doing crime and fighting crime? Evil-minded and always up to something vs. well-intended, positive-oriented and peaceful?

Could it all be reduced to the fact that humans and humanity simply can't stand real Authority? Real Authority is anything they didn't come up with themselves.

Unbelievable.

Speechboggling.

Yet ... The final answer isn't so despiseable as the crime rivalry and the anti-authority rivalry.

No.

Far, far, far, from it.

So, that's what it wasn't.

... But now.

Now ...

Let's get to what it was.

There are only two small ones of the fundamental categories consisting of only a few sub-types.

The second category is half the sub-types of the first, the predominant one.

Category One :

Four types : Standing still. Walking. Running. Sprinting.

Category Two :

Two types : Sitting. Lying flat.

Category one started it all. From Standing still.

Soon that became walking. From then on it was a rivalry in itself. What's better? Standing or walking? This became pondering the ins and outs of it.

Running followed to break out of the rivalry of the first two, but didn't. Sprinting was augmented running, but a dead-end. Can't augment sprinting.

So the second category kicked in : Sitting. Then lying flat.

EOS. (End Of Story).

The fundamental principle of human striving as explained here in ten lines of easily digestible text became a core engine to absolutely all else in human terms. So I'm really done with explaining or encouraging anything complex ever again. Such as psychology, good or bad characters, or a blend thereof. Or personal experiences that added up to resentments that still linger, distorting the creativity of individuals, groups, and masses. Fear and Hope for better or worse or Both. Even illness, AIDS, and remedies.

In other words : Flat out – short, to the Point, and irrevokably :

I quit Sciences.

Joy and enjoyment of beauty, aesthetics and sonority.

I enjoy the Noblest Arts. I enjoy Noble. That's non-exclusively my own.
I always welcome anyone else's beauty, aesthetics, and sonority.

Sincerely

Lord Dionys
